Research Proposal

Background
The development of the computer as a tool and problem solver has generally been thought to solve those problems that have no more complex solution and those in areas defined by the growing importance of "business process" which are defined as processes which represent the sequential importance of steps in customer needs. As the types of problems to be solved have become more complex, it has become necessary to develop more sophisticated approaches to solve them. The new environment is still relatively unexplored and the System of System Methodology (SSM) of the 1980s is still in its infancy. The SSM is a methodology for defining and analyzing the complex, multi-level, multi-domain, and multi-disciplinary systems. The SSM is a methodology for defining and analyzing the complex, multi-level, multi-domain, and multi-disciplinary systems. The SSM is a methodology for defining and analyzing the complex, multi-level, multi-domain, and multi-disciplinary systems.

The emphasis placed upon such early approaches to address the new environment of solving and analyzing a very problem set only has the risk of failing to tackle problems effectively because of the complexity of the problem set. The SSM is a methodology for defining and analyzing the complex, multi-level, multi-domain, and multi-disciplinary systems. The SSM is a methodology for defining and analyzing the complex, multi-level, multi-domain, and multi-disciplinary systems. The SSM is a methodology for defining and analyzing the complex, multi-level, multi-domain, and multi-disciplinary systems.

The system process, including the business process and system function in terms of conceptual and operational approaches to system function in the planning and execution phases, must be defined and supported by the new, operational environment. To help respond to this challenge, we need to have effective system approaches and methods of application across domains that allow us to define, structure, and understand why they in the case to reduce improve the future application to new systems.

Jackwerth (2001, p.115) emphasizes the potential to develop Global System Process through an emerging process of development and analysis, complex (Jackwerth, 2001) on how (2001) illustrates the significance of knowledge and facilities in such complex work.

Purpose of Research
An ongoing question within the proposed research is whether the application of CST can bring about significant improvement in the design process of system processes and management systems. The Marketing Research Process and Proposals

Multiple Choice Questions

- _____ is information collected specifically for a current research problem or opportunity.
 A. Primary data
 B. Alternate data
 C. Secondary data
 D. Warehouse data
 E. Background data
 Answer: A
 Difficulty: Easy
 Page: 26
- Gatekeeper technologies are used to _____.
 A. prevent the introduction of new and creative marketing strategies
 B. help market researchers track the behavior of internet users
 C. protect one's privacy against intrusive marketing practices
 D. allow marketers to use traditional methods for contacting people
 E. simplify the process of getting user information using telemarketing
 Answer: C
 Difficulty: Easy
 Page: 26
- Which of the following statements is true about the information research process?
 A. It narrows the applicability of the research process in solving organizational problems and creating opportunities.
 B. A more appropriate name for the information research process is now the traditional marketing research process.
 C. It is a systematic approach to collecting, analyzing, interpreting, and transforming data into decision-making information.
 D. It is especially useful when costs outweigh the value of the research.
 E. It serves as a written contract between the decision maker and the researcher.
 Answer: C
 Difficulty: Medium
 Page: 27
- As compared to marketing researchers, management decision-makers _____.
 A. like to explore new phenomena
 B. like abstractions rather than concrete findings
 C. focus on information that allows certainty
 D. are scientific and analytical thinkers
 E. focus only on past information
 Answer: C
 Difficulty: Medium

ASSIGNMENT 1

Describe with examples the differences between qualitative research and quantitative research. In what situation that a research needs to be conducted by means of mixtures of qualitative and quantitative methods.

Qualitative research is a method of inquiry appropriated in many different academic disciplines, traditionally in the social sciences, but also in market research and further contexts. Qualitative researchers aim to gather an in-depth understanding of human behavior and the reasons that govern such behavior. The qualitative method investigates the why and how of decision making, not just what, where, when. Hence, smaller but focused samples are more often needed, rather than large samples.

Qualitative methods produce information only on the particular cases studied, and any more general conclusions are only hypotheses (informative guesses). Qualitative means a non-numerical data collection or explanation based on the attributes of the graph or source of data. For example, if you are asked to explain in qualitative terms a thermal image displayed in multiple colours, then you would explain the colour differences rather than the heat's numerical value.)

First, cases can be selected purposefully, according to whether or not they typify certain characteristics or contextual locations. Secondly, the role or position of the researcher is given greater critical attention. This is because in qualitative research the possibility of the researcher taking a 'neutral' or transcendental position is seen as more problematic in practical and/or philosophical terms. Hence qualitative researchers are often exhorted to reflect on their role in the research process and make this clear in the analysis. Thirdly, while qualitative data analysis can take a wide variety of forms it tends to differ from quantitative research in the focus on language, signs and meaning as well as approaches to analysis that are holistic and contextual, rather than reductionist and isolationist. Nevertheless, systematic and transparent approaches to analysis are almost always regarded as essential for rigor. For example, many qualitative methods require researchers to carefully code data and discern and document themes in a consistent and reliable way.
